SHOP FROM HOME DEPOT WITH JUST YOUR VOICE THANKS TO THE GOOGLE ASSISTANT

Sep 06, 2017

ATLANTA, Sept. 6, 2017 /PRNewswire/ -- Need something from The Home Depot? Just ask the Google Assistant. The Home Depot will join Google Express this fall, adding the ability for its customers to shop through voice with the Assistant on Google Home, making it more convenient than ever for customers to shop however they want.

The Home Depot offers customers flexibility with its 2,282 stores and digital endless aisle. Later this fall, customers will have an additional way to purchase innovative products - with the Assistant on Google Home or on the Google Express website or app.

"We're focused on delivering convenience and value as we continue to invest in best-in-class interconnected experiences for our customers," said Online President and Chief Marketing Officer Kevin Hofmann. "Google has been a key strategic partner for us over many years and we're excited to take our relationship to the next level with the Google Assistant and Google Express."

Google Home is a trademark of Google Inc.

SOURCE The Home Depot