

Advocacy and Political Activity Report 2025

The Home Depot recognizes that legislative and regulatory actions of public policymakers impact the Company's business, as well as our associates and our communities. Therefore, the Company has a responsibility to participate in the political process and encourages our associates to do so. Our Core Values drive all strategic decisions inside our Company, and we build relationships with elected officials who help enable our ability to implement those strategies to the benefit of our associates, customers, shareholders, and communities. Our Government Relations department, led by a vice president who reports to our General Counsel, manages our political activity. The team carefully analyzes our political engagement, including political contributions, for alignment with our key priorities, guided by our Core Values (<https://corporate.homedepot.com/about/values>). The Company's Board of Directors, primarily acting through the Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee, exercises oversight of our corporate political activity, including conducting periodic reviews of, and receiving updates regarding, the Company's engagement with elected officials and the alignment between our political activity and our strategic priorities.

The Home Depot generally does not make contributions from corporate funds to political campaigns, super political action committees, or political parties but is committed to disclosing such contributions if they are made. All corporate political contributions must be in compliance with applicable law and Company policy, must be approved in advance by the Company's Government Relations department, and will be made to promote the interests of the Company and without regard for the private political preferences of executives or directors. In addition, and like most businesses, The Home Depot belongs to trade associations that engage in lobbying activities and also contribute to issue coalitions and, occasionally, ballot initiatives to support efforts relevant to our business and the retail industry.

More information about the Company's political activities is available at the following websites:

- The Home Depot's employee-funded political action committee ("PAC") files regular reports with the Federal Election Commission, and political contributions to and by the PAC are required to be disclosed. These reports are publicly available on the FEC website at <http://www.fec.gov/>.
- The Home Depot and any registered federal lobbyists that it engages to support the Company's participation in the political legislative and regulatory processes are required to file lobbying reports with the U.S. Congress. These reports, which include information on issues lobbied, agencies contacted, and expenditures made, are publicly available at the websites of the U.S. House (<http://lobbyingdisclosure.house.gov>) and the U.S. Senate (https://www.senate.gov/legislative/Public_Disclosure/LDA_reports.htm). Reports of state lobbying activities are filed with the applicable state government offices and are publicly available.

We may not agree with every position taken by a candidate, elected official, or trade association that the Company or the PAC supports, and a contribution to any individual or organization should not be taken to mean agreement with every position taken by that individual or group. However, we use several business-focused criteria and our core values to make decisions that will allow us to have a seat at the table to engage, both on the issues on which we align and those on which we disagree, to support our business, associates, and communities.
